

Five fixed probability bins are descriptive; sparse bins and case-control prevalence do not establish clinical-risk calibration.